ABSTRACT

Prior to the seventeenth century, in the pre-mechanical political arrangement of Europe, the state and the congregation were joined together. Kingdoms ruled and religion controlled the administering framework. It is with Renaissance and Industrial Revolution that the state was disconnected from the congregation and there developed the possibility of sovereign country state. The political philosophy on which the states were grounded was the majority rule government. The state comprised of natives, who delighted in freedom and equity, yet in addition the right to speak freely and articulation of perspectives, and of taking up any monetary action and support in political procedures obviously. India is one of the modernized political frameworks of the world. Majority rule government is the most modernized framework.
